Positioning: Plain-English financial planning for busy Singapore families — no jargon, no hard sell, a one-page plan you will actually follow.

Target first

1. The mid-career family (35-49) — juggling children's education, an HDB or condo loan and parents' needs. Most enquiries in firm-metrics come from this group, and they convert best after a free chat.
2. The pre-retiree (50-62) — CPF LIFE, retirement sums and "do I have enough?". High intent, highest-value plans.

Channels to start with

3. LinkedIn — professionals research advisers here; long-form posts work.
4. Facebook — families and pre-retirees; community groups; events.
5. The Sunny Sunday email — turns checklist downloads into booked chats.

YouTube follows once the first three run smoothly (one explainer a fortnight).

Content themes: Know your retirement number · CPF made simple ·

Protect the family · Pay less tax, legally.

The website must: put "Book a free chat" in view on every screen; offer the free Money Check-up Checklist in exchange for an email; show the retirement calculator with a clear illustration label; answer the six FAQs; show the general-information disclaimer.

Risks: content read as financial advice or as promising returns (MAS digital advertising guidelines); emailing people who did not opt in (PDPA); publishing a wrong CPF or tax figure.
